Oppose Wickersham's Plan
To Halt Rum Smuggling
Over Borders

HEARINGS TO BE HELD

Dry Leaders Are Anxious To Strengthen President
Hoover's Hands

By William S. Neal
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Growing opposition to the creation of a military force to halt smuggling on the Canadian and Mexican borders under the Coast Guard today threatened the third phase of the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission's program to better prohibition enforcement.

The opposition, frankly recognized by dry leaders anxious to strengthen President Hoover's hand, is expected to be aired in hearings soon to be held by the House Interstate Commerce Committee on the measure.

With the commission bill transferring prohibition enforcement from the Treasury to the Justice Department under fire in the Senate and the "juryless trial" court reform program apparently buried in the House judiciary committee, the immediate legislative future of the reorganization program appeared dark.

While the differences of various departments over border jurisdiction which has prevented unification of the border patrol for years, have apparently been wiped out by the insistence of President Hoover for co-operation, other questions have arisen.

Rep. Hoch (R.) of Kansas, a strong dry and chairman of the House subcommittee in charge of Coast Guard matters and the border patrol bill, said he would call a hearing soon on the measure.

There are many members of Congress, he said, who object to converting the Coast Guard into a prohibition enforcement agency on land.

While the Coast Guard fights against rum smuggling at sea, this additional burden naturally fell to the Coast Guard because it has always been the anti-smuggling force on the high seas, it is pointed out.

Because the Coast Guard has primarily been a life-saving organization, he said, there are many who object to its officers and men being turned from this work to prohibition enforcement.

The new bill, it points out, endeavors to separate the Coast Guard's border activities by establishing the border patrol as a separate unit of the guard.

It provides, however, that officers trained in the Coast Guard's academy may be detailed to the border work.

The Coast Guard, it is pointed out, is a military organization, and automatically becomes a part of the Navy in war-time.

Thus border patrolmen would not be merely civil service employees, as prohibition officers are at present, but would be enlisted men in a branch of the national defense.

PLAN IS SUGGESTED

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 14.—(INS)—With the proposed Hog Island air base and Central Airport, Camden, as the hub of the Regional Planning Federation today recommended the development of 30 other airports in the tri-state district to be coordinated with the two main air transport terminals.

A half dozen new airports also were suggested connecting the tri-state district with Bethlehem, Scranton, Syracuse, Buffalo, Atlantic City, and other coastal cities.

These were the highlights of the survey of future aviation needs over an area of 4,000 square miles in the tri-state district as embodied in the Federation's report which was made public today by Major Samuel B. Eckert, chairman of the aviation committee.

"Just as boats required docks and harbors, just as trains required roads of steel, just as motors required streets and highways, so must aircraft have airports and airways," states the report.

The recent agreement reached by the City of Philadelphia and the U. S. Shipping Board selling the $50,000,000 war-time Hog Island shipyard and its surrounding tract of land to Philadelphia for development as an airfield and water terminal resulted in the survey by the Regional Planning Federation and its subsequent report.

The Federation suggested the establishment of a number of additional airports, transport terminals, and auxiliary landing fields.

"An airport in the vicinity of Princeton because of the surrounding population and proximity to Princeton University.

"Development as a transport terminal of Mercer airport which serves the Trenton section.

"An auxiliary landing field in the vicinity of the airway beacon at Langhorne, and another along the airway 10 miles south of this point.

"Similar auxiliary fields along the New Jersey shore of the Delaware River adjacent to Gibbstown and Pennsgrove.

"A major airport to serve Wilmington, Del.

"Development of existing fields at Coatesville and Media, as important aerial service bases and similar facilities to serve the West Chester-Downingtown area, all as links in the New Philadelphia-Pittsburg airway.

"Auxiliary fields near Ambler and Lansdale and an aerial base in or near the Perkies-Sellersville area along a suggested air route connecting the tri-state district with Syracuse and Buffalo by way of Bethlehem and Easton.

"Local airports for Chester, and Kennett Square.

"An aerial service base near Phoenixville and expansion and improvement of the existing facilities at Pottstown.

"Auxiliary fields in the vicinity of Chadd's Ford, Elverson, Birdsboro and Greenlane to care for future air traffic."

TWO POWERFUL POLITICAL FACTORS ENDORSE CANDIDACY OF SENATOR JOSEPH R. GRUNDY TO SUCCEED HIMSELF AS SENATOR FROM PENNA.

W. L. Mellon, Former Chairman of the Republican State Committee, Says He Favors Mr. Grundy Because of His Ability to Represent the Interests of the State—Frank Feeney, Labor Leader, Also Urges the Return of The Junior Senator.

W. L. Mellon, former chairman of the Republican State Committee and a recognized powerful factor in the politics of Western Pennsylvania, yesterday issued a statement endorsing the candidacy of Senator R. Grundy, of Bristol.

It was the first time since the opening of the canvass that Mellon publicly revealed his position.

Frank Feeney, president of the International Union of Elevator Constructors, also endorsed Mr. Grundy. Speaking of Senator Grundy Mr. Mellon said:

"I was one of those who persuaded Mr. Grundy to make a great personal sacrifice and accept appointment as a United States Senator. I felt then as I feel now, that conditions in Pennsylvania and in the U. S. Senate demand the services of a man of Senator Grundy's character, exceptional ability, unquestioned courage and long experience.

"His remarkable record during his short time in the Senate has borne out this estimate on his great value to the people of Pennsylvania. He fearlessly met a situation which appeared hopeless, broke up by sheer ability and determination a coalition, hostile to the interest of the people of Pennsylvania, and secured the passage of a tariff bill which will help to reduce unemployment, keep wages at a satisfactory standard, and maintain prosperity.

"There is such a direct relation between protection to Pennsylvania industries and unemployment at satisfactory wages that we cannot afford to lose the services of a man of the acknowledged ability and experience of Senator Grundy.

"We should not encourage the importation of iron, steel, glass, pottery, shoes, cement and many other necessities from other countries where wages are poor. We can and should make these products in Pennsylvania with Pennsylvania labor at good wages. Unless we are vigilant with regard to the tariff, we are inviting unemployment and possibly lower wages.

"When these products are made

"We should not encourage the importation of iron, steel, glass, pottery, shoes, cement and many other necessities from other countries where wages are poor. We can and should make these products in Pennsylvania with Pennsylvania labor at good wages. Unless we are vigilant with regard to the tariff, we are inviting unemployment and possibly lower wages.

"When these products are made abroad they consume coal and raw material produced and deprive Pennsylvania miners and other workmen of that much employment and reduce the tonnage and employment on our transportation lines.

"There was never a time when it was so urgent that Pennsylvania be represented in the U. S. Senate by two Senators of the calibre of those we now have, who are capable of protecting our workers and industries against a flood of imported products."

Mr. Feeney, active in Philadelphia labor and political circles many years, declared that the protective tariff, on which Senator Grundy is a foremost expert, is the principal issue of the Senatorial campaign.

"The candidacy of Senator Joseph R. Grundy in the coming primary contest merits the support of all classes of citizens in Pennsylvania who want to see prosperity brought back to our people," he said.

"The political atmosphere is full of extraneous issues manufactured by professional politicians in antagonism to the candidacy of Senator Grundy, but it is inconceivable that the people—and especially the working people of Pennsylvania—will be misled or further fooled by professional politicians with axes to grind.

"The tariff of Mr. Grundy means encouraged industries. Encouraged industries mean jobs. Jobs mean wages for the working people. Wages mean purchasing power. Purchasing power means business for merchants and all forms of business allied with the great industries of our Commonwealth.

"The promises of wily, unscrupulous, deceiving politicians mean nothing for the working people of this State. Too often have the people been fooled by false promises.

"Nothing is weaker to the cause of Senator Grundy's major foes than calling Senator Grundy harsh names, giving out dark hints of his enmity to labor, his antagonism to legislation friendly to those who toil in the working places of our State. The working people mean to pay more attention to the facts of the campaign than to the calling of harsh names.

"It is patent to anybody who has followed the course of legislation in this State for the last twenty years that Senator Grundy has been as sane and friendly to ameliorative legislation as have any of his distinguished opponents. His career is marked by the fact that at all times he stood for legislation with a firm economic base."

WHITE RIBBONERS HAVE ENJOYABLE SPRING MEETING

Institute is Held in Langhorne
M. E. Church; About
250 Attend

MRS. FRANTZ SPEAKS

Endorse Pinchot and Grundy
As Candidates in Coming Primaries

LANGHORNE, Apr. 14.—Bucks County White Ribboners who gathered in the M. E. Church here on Saturday for their 15th annual institute enjoyed a most interesting and helpful program of addresses interspersed with songs and hymns by the congregation and solos by Solebury, Langhorne and Bristol members.

Morning session was opened at 10:15 by Mrs. Lucy A. Harper, county president, who expressed her pleasure that so many of the local unions were represented. Prayer by the pastor of the church, Rev. Zook, was followed by Miss Packer's scripture reading and inspiring messages.

Palms and plants and spring blossoms made the church attractive as well as the basket of white carnations on the speaker's table, each flower representing a member promoted to the higher life during the year, to whom Miss Packer gave loving tribute in her beautiful memorial service at noon.

Greetings were extended by Mrs. Hannah Pickering, president of Langhorne Union; also by the pastor, Mr. Zook, to which Mrs. Lowmes, of Churchville, responded.

Mrs. Myrtle Kester, in charge of legislative and citizenship departments, brought to the attention of the group the political situation in regard to candidates to be named at the primaries May 20th. Inasmuch as Gifford Pinchot and Joseph R. Grundy have declared themselves more nearly in accord with W. C. T. U. standards than any of the other men in the field, a resolution was adopted endorsing them as candidates for Governor and Senator, respectively.

Mrs. Martha Van Doren presented her department of Child Welfare, advising co-operation with community nurses who come in contact with mothers and children needing this help. Mrs. Risdon also presented her department of humane education. Posters illustrating both these lines of work were displayed in the church.

Miss Meta Leedom, of the Y. P. B., told of the medal contest work. Mrs. Lavinia Hartley brought to the attention of the meeting the recent announcement of Will Hays for the motion picture magnates their intended policy of eliminating from their productions all objectionable features—drinking, profanity, and indecency. This decision they declare is the result of pressure brought to bear by people who were concerned lest this very powerful agency in the education of the young should be completely demoralizing. This announcement was most gracefully received.

Satisfaction was expressed at the measure of success attained by the Naval Conference.

After a prayer and praise service opening the afternoon session and report of noon executive meeting, the main feature of the day was the delightful and stirring address by Mrs. Nina G. Frantz, president of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. Mrs. Frantz discussed the unfairness of the Literary Digest poll which ignores the large majority of women as evidenced by that audience of about 250, very few of whom had received a ballot. She also pointed to the weak arguments of the Wets before the Judiciary Committee and the gross inconsistency of President Atterbury who demands personal liberty for himself but denies it to all employees under the P. R. R. "Rule G" which was in effect years before the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted. It was brought out that the members should be ready to meet with facts the propaganda of the Wets, much of which has no more foundation than this story told to Mrs. Frantz by a young society woman that "floods of liquor" had abounded at a recent social function which she had attended.

Lightning Fires Oil Tank At Centre Bridge, Last Night

Lightning early last night struck a tank at the plant of the Tuscarora Oil Company, Ltd., at Centre Bridge, Pa., opposite Stockton, N. J., destroying, according to officials, about 100 barrels of crude oil out of the many thousands of gallons contained in it. The prompt work on the part of the company's employees prevented the fire from doing greater damage. They and members of the Stockton Fire Company fought the blaze for about an hour and a half before it was brought under control.

During the electrical storm at about 6:30 o'clock a bolt struck one of the huge tanks situated some distance from the main tank. A watchman discovered the fire and turned in an alarm. Workers began fighting the blaze with chemical fumes, which were forced into the blazing tank by high pressure pumps. The fire fighting preparation is kept in large quantities at the plant.

While the employees were fighting the blazing oil the Stockton firemen were pouring water on burning woodwork about the tank.

Lightning has struck the oil company plant eight times since 1914. Last August a bolt hit one of the tanks and considerable oil was burned. It is believed that heat of the tanks draws the lightning.

The oil plant is one of the largest in this section. Oil in the crude form is pumped into the tanks from the oil lines from the West and later it is sent to Bayway, N. J., to be refined.

KIDNAPPED GIRL ATTACKED IN AUTO IN BUCKS COUNTY

Victim, 18, Carried from Port
Richmond to Knight's
Road Last Night

SISTER TOSSED OUT CAR

She Returns Home and Tells
Police Officer of Her
Sister's Plight

One of two sisters who accepted a ride with four youths was kidnapped and brought into Bucks County from Philadelphia and attacked late last night, after the younger one of the pair had broken away from her captors and made her way back into Philadelphia.

The girls are Stella Chmielowski, 18, 4514 Richmond street and her sister, Mary, 15, Both of Philadelphia.

Mary told the police that she and sister met four youths at Richmond and Orthodox streets at 10 o'clock last night and were offered a ride to Tacony and then home.

Mary said when the party reached Tacony they did not stop but continued on until they reached a point in Bucks County along Knights Road. After several miles the men attacked Mary but she succeeded in breaking away and making her escape. The men then drove off with her sister.

Mary started back home and although she did not know where she was succeeded in getting back to Tacony and met Wagner, a Philadelphia police officer and told him what had happened.

Tacony police notified Lieutenant Dean of the Morrisville State Police barracks and Dean located Stella walking on the highway after the men had deserted her.

Both girls claim that they do not know the men.

Banquet Served on Occasion Of Auxiliary Anniversary

The Ladies' Auxiliary of America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company, No. 2, recently celebrated its second anniversary, which was held in the hose house. Each member was privileged to bring one guest and there were about fifty people present.

The officers who were elected for the coming year are: Mrs. Warren Thompson, president; Mrs. Ida Appleton, vice-president; Mrs. Adeline Smith, treasurer; Mrs. Hilda Albright, secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth Delker and Miss Ethel Thomas, trustees.

WORK VS. CHARITY

Opposition to the dole as a relief measure during the present unemployment has come from the unexpected source of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. His position he stated before the senate commerce committee in few words:

"Men should earn money, not have it doled out to them without labor in return. Charity can never be the solution of unemployment."

Neither is the labor chieftain a firm believer in the power of man-made laws over the economical laws. He admits that in times of unemployment the government can help through free employment service, maintenance of vocational schools and public construction, but sees the problem as much more complex than that.

Industry, he says, has the major responsibility in conserving labor and protecting it from periodic fluctuations. The only rational remedy for unemployment is more jobs, and they can be furnished only by private enterprise.

A weakness in the economic structure which can reduce the national income five per cent in three months is a situation no producer can afford to ignore. Every industrialist knows he has prospered when there has been full employment at high wages, and that he has lost money when there has been unemployment and reduction of wages.

Industry's job is to stabilize employment, eliminate waste and increase efficiency to the point where they will counteract low foreign wages, and set apart surpluses that will enable them to carry their employees over periods of temporary depression. Had factories been able to maintain their full payrolls with curtailed production when the present depression started it would have been shortened by months. Lay-offs have aggravated the condition and delayed the return to prosperity.

It pays to be upright. Look at the popularity of the pronoun "I."

ECHOES OF THE PAST

ITEMS OF INTEREST AS CLIPPED FROM NEWSPAPER FILES

Jonathan S. Wright, 35 years ago, was named a fish and game warden to see that no illegal fishing was done in the Delaware, above Bristol, according to a copy of the Newtown Enterprise dated April 18, 1895.

Other interesting items clipped from the files of this paper are as follows: Aaron Black, of Yardley, sold the hotel to Edward Insinger, of Germantown.

Shad fishing in the waters of the upper Delaware was to begin April 15 and end June 19.

Hearing footsteps on the second floor of her home, Mrs. John T. Fish, of Fallington, found a Negro stealing money and a watch from a bureau. She grabbed the watch from his hand. He knocked her down and escaped. Mrs. Fish fell unconscious to the floor where she was found by her daughter when she returned from school. An investigation showed that the thief had taken about $25 in money, some silver spoons and valuable papers.

Frank Collins, of Morrisville, while returning from Trenton, was sand-bagged by five men on the Delaware river bridge and robbed of $20.

A copy of the Enterprise dated April 6, 1895, also contains the following: Ashbel W. Watson, Edward H. Buckman and Thomas P. Chambers representing the Newtown, Langhorne and Bristol Trolley Street Railway Company appeared before Newtown Borough Council and asked that an ordinance be passed granting them permission to lay tracks on the borough streets starting at State and Jefferson down State to Centre avenue out Centre avenue to Lincoln avenue, thence down Lincoln avenue to State street.

Harry W. Johnson was appointed postmaster at Hulmeville in place of Joseph A. Class, who moved away.

The Bucks County Intelligencer, dated April 3, 1899, gave the following:

An event of interest took place in Bristol fifty years ago, when Bristol Lodge, No. 25, A. Y. M., celebrated its tenth birthday. Among the Doylestown residents who attended the celebration were Hon. Richard Watson, ex-Attorney General Lear, ex-Senator Yerkes and Hon. Richard Vaux. According to the old records, the first worshipful master of the lodge was John Clark, an officer of the British Army. The senior warden was Samuel Benetzer, while Dr. William Mc-

Ilvaine was the junior warden. The senior deacon was J. W. Livingston Palmer and the junior deacon's office was held by Patrick Griffith. The records failed to designate the exact meeting place of the lodge when it was instituted.

Rev. George Alcorn, who formerly was pastor of the Tullytown M. E. Church, moved to Delaware county, where he intended to engage in religious work. His successor at Tullytown was Rev. O. L. Mintzer.

Harry J. Shoemaker, who was considered an outstanding success as a teacher, resigned as teacher of the Tullytown grammar school and was succeeded by Miss Anna Headley.

Another robbery took place in the county when thieves entered the large store of John Johnson, Hulmeville. Some ready-made clothing and cigars were missing. This was the second time within several months that the place had been robbed. Several vagrants seen in the community a short time before the theft was committed were suspected.

CHAPTER XXV—Continued

He caught up his pistols, his money, and ran to the door—too late; already the cavalcade was leaving the village street; he did not know their destination; never could he overtake them; Hensdorff flung down his money and arms in disgust.

Christian approached his own estate, he noted how negligently it had been kept.

He passed round to the side of the house, and lightly mounted the balcony that ran in front of the room that had been his room, and, since, the room of the Princess Eleonora. Exactly thus, precisely so, must Leopold have done that other night . . . some such night as this, this same winter.

Christian looked into a lighted room, that had once been his room. She was there. Odd that he and Leopold should both have thought her dead! For she was there, and unchanged; seated by the hearth, and playing a game of chess—by herself, for she was quite alone, moving the black pieces with the feated on a hundred fields, but, who now after a little must defeat them. . . .

Christian gave the order to charge. "En avant," as he had given it so many times before to the same men; and the Uhlans and Black Cuirassiers responded with shouts and shouts of "General Crack! General Crack!"

"That, if nothing else," smiled Christian, and bore down headlong on the Russians, who outnumbered his force ten, fifteen to one; who swept him and his Uhlans back, beneath his own scanty artillery.

Christian charged, again and again, searching for death as if he were searching for a lover.

After two hours of frantic fighting, reckless charge and bloody counter charge, a desperate and confused melee, Christian's troops were driven back never to charge again.

"You have done enough," said Christian, to Banning, beckoning him to his side; "give it up now, and serve another man. As for me, it is over."

The Swede, looking at him closely, saw that he was wounded; blood-stained was the tattered lace that fell from his cravat over his uniform; his right arm hung limp by his side, and his dark face was ashen. "Let us charge again," he murmured, "and die in the melee." But the Swede observed that he was reeling in the saddle, and hardly knew what he said. Banning seized the horse's bridle and turned him away.

"Your Highness does not wish to fall into their hands to die!" he cried, hoarsely and abruptly.

But Christian tried to resist, and whispered: "The flag, the flag!"

This had fallen, the standard bearer having been cut down near them. Banning stooped, and rent it from the pole, flung it across the saddle, and again led Christian's horse away, through the stamped press of cavalry on whom the Russians were again closing.

But not far; Banning swerved as a shot whistled over his shoulder, and in that instant he saw General Crack fall from the saddle, while the horse, blood-stained, galloped wildly away through the smoke of the guns from the fort.

Banning dismounted; they were a little apart from the general engagement, half hidden behind the rising knoll where Christian had taken his stand that morning, half sheltered by the black plumes which sent their funeral darkness high into the cold spring sky.

"Were you shot? Was Your Highness shot?" asked Banning, kneeling beside the wounded man. Christian nodded; then murmured: "At last . . . it was long enough, eh?"

He raised himself on one elbow, and asked, in a difficult whisper, for the bag. "If I wrap it around me," he said, "they will not profane me. That is the best end for it—and me, eh, Banning? A grave, a shroud—a grave in Kurland," he stammered, smiling, "a shroud, the Kurland flag . . . after all, 'not so mean'."

Banning obeyed. Christian twisted the standard round his waist. The effort made him cough, and he wiped blood from his lips, his chin and breast.

"Don't let them get me while I'm alive, Banning," he muttered; "don't let them have me till I'm dead! This should have been quicker."

Banning drew his sword and stood on guard. Christian turned over on his side. His own soil; the soil of Kurland. . . . At least that . . . Kurland . . . after all. . . .

Banning prayed that General Crack might die quickly; and Christian said, still staring at the leaf: "Shoot me, if I do not die immediately. I would do it myself if my hand were more steady."

Banning, looking over his shoulder into the fire-stained muck, answered: "They have not observed us."

"This should not take so long," murmured Christian, striving to preserve his countenance in the face of the bangs that assailed him. The Swede gazed down at his master through the vapours that had drifted even here, and saw what he had so often seen, the unmistakable impress of death.

"Your Highness may be snatched away at any moment," he said, "and do not fear but that I can keep them at bay."

Christian set his head against the tree; he made an effort as if he were before a mirror, to adjust his cravat, his uniform, the stars on his breast; a troop of Russians stormed up the knoll; Banning leapt to his feet and cried, "Halt!" in so commanding a voice and with such a sweep of his bare sword that the enemy paused.

But there had been no need for this defiance; General Crack was dead and staring at the bright green leaf.

GRAND THEATRE

Admission is freely made in the film colony at Hollywood that F. W. Murnau, more than any other director, peoples his pictures with men and women who, with the least amount of make-up, fit the characters they are called upon to portray.

This is particularly true in the Fox Movietone talking picture, "City Girl," an epic of the wheat ranches which Murnau directed for Fox Films. The production comes to the Grand Theatre tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Edith York, in whose face time has put lines, and Nature given a meek expression, and eyes that seem ready to fill with tears on the least provocation, has the role of the downtrodden wife of a surly, avaricious wheat rancher.

Dan Torrence, whose stern Scotch countenance looks the part of Tustine, immediately he erases the usual twinkle from his eyes, seems physically to have been made for the part.

Even the various members of the threshing crew were hand-picked for the particular physical attributes they possess together with histrionic ability.

Charles Farrell, the male lead has a role that fits his appearance as well as his ability, and Mary Duncan, who first is seen as a Chicago waitress, and later is thrown into a totally different environment on a wheat ranch, seems like a flower among weeds, which the story intends she shall be.

Going Williams, Dawn O'Day, Ivan Linow and Dick Alexander are other players who are perfectly cast by Mr. Murnau, styled the most exacting director in picture details.

attended. "Oh, my!" said Mrs. Franz, "and did it ruin your slippers and gown, and did you have to mop it up?" "Oh, no; not so much as that!" and finally admitted that only two flasks were in the whole party. About the question of Law Enforcement: "We need to stress the danger of alcohol in any form, no matter how sold or where, it is the same old poison. Our greatest weapon is prayer, which we should use more faithfully, for our source of power is the Divine Omnipotence which alone can order the unruly wills and affections of sinful men. More things are wrought by prayer than the world dreams of. This is the victory that overcometh the world—even your faith."

Rheumatism Pains Stop in 7 minutes

Almost Instant Relief

I just want to write a few lines to let you know what MUSCLETONE has done for me. Some years ago I began to get rheumatic pains in my leg. I tried many medicines without getting relief. A friend told my husband to try MUSCLETONE on me, which gave me almost instant relief. I would not now be without MUSCLETONE in the house.—Mrs. Mary Minute, 615 Linden Ave., Burlington, N. J.

Anyone who honestly wants to end the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica or neuralgia can do so. Science has found a new way to end muscular agony and distress so quickly—and safe—it seems almost miraculous. Pain actually stops in 7 to 10 minutes. Accumulated toxins are absorbed and complete relief is found even in severe conditions.

MUSCLETONE acts almost instantly. Nothing is taken internally. No drugs—no dosing. Just a simple liquid applied directly to the troubled muscle or joint. Yet it acts invariably and amazingly. And—this is important—it never burns or irritates. All good druggists have MUSCLETONE for $1.00.
